Kurt Wilson, general Manager of Yellowstone Public Radio was the guest speaker today. He told us his great life story and has met some amazing people as a sports broadcaster including Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, Michael Jordan, and other great basketball players from the nineties. He currently manages 12 stations including KEMC.

NPR is a major part of their format however; it is still important to keep the classical and jazz music for their listeners. He is very interested in what his listeners want to hear and wants to provide as much to them as possible.

The federal government has mandated that they raise funds through fundraisers with the public. Approximately 1 in 10 listeners donate to Public Radio. Yellowstone Public Radio has increased in size and departments since he has taken over as GM. They now have new programs to offer including the more positive local news stories. He wants to focus more on local news. If you would like to listen in to Yellowstone Public Radio you can do so on AM 91.7. They also have an app for the listener on the go. They just starting to do podcasts for the on-demand listener.

The meeting adjourned at 7:54 am

Do not forget to turn your clocks back tomorrow night!
